Subject: Fracking in Oklahoma and water supply

Hello Ms. Giles-Parker,

I am a resident of Oklahoma City and am very concerned about a law that was just passed by our Governor, Mary Fallin, regarding allowing fracking and drilling within cities in Oklahoma. It will come into effect late August. Fallin has made it unlawful for any city to object to fracking and drilling. The fracking and drilling is proposed to be near many of our state's drinking water supplies. And of course you know earthquakes have increased 90% in the past year in Oklahoma and I believe, as do others, that it is solely caused by the fracking. The major contributors to Mary Fallin's inaugural were oil companies, in excess of $25,000, specifically: Major energy donors to her last inaugural included Chesapeake Energy ($26,000), Devon Energy ($26,000), Continental Resources ($25,000), and American Electric Power ($20,000). Can the EPA step in and help Oklahomans? I'm afraid of a horrible disaster, either a devastating earthquake, or cancer or other horrible consequence of our water supplies being polluted, and then it will be too late to save many lives lost. My husband Bill ((b) (6) (b) (6)) is an incredible federal attorney, I am his senior legal assistant, and we have a lawfirm but cannot afford the time necessary to fight such a huge battle alone. Can you help? Thanks!
